

CARIBBEAN

WHAT DREAMS ARE MADE OF

CARIBBEAN GOLF is the stuff of mainlanders' midwinter daydreams. Teasing trade winds can be as much an element of play as sand bunkers. The beauty of sea, sky and beach bluff can simultaneously distract and enhance your game. And these courses are set in resorts with the antidote to the post-holiday doldrums, whether it be reveling in the indulgences of a full-service spa or simply letting resort staff handle everything for you.

Powder-pink sandy beaches surround The Abaco Club, a luxurious enclave centered on a Scottish links in a tropical paradise.

The Abaco Club on Winding Bay in the Bahamas is a retreat within a retreat, lying on a peninsula that's surrounded by 2 1/2 miles of deep powdered-pink-sand beach and backed by dramatic bluffs. The Club, which is managed by the Ritz-Carlton, has been designed with a sensitivity to the environment that gives it a "castaway" flavor. It's an easy-to-reach paradise for the discerning.

"The Abaco Club is a beautiful and truly special place," says Annika Sorenstam.

Hilltop cottages, estate homes and cabanas integrate the beauty of their surroundings into their design. Two- three- and four-bedroom cottages overlook either Winding Bay or the 18th fairway and the Atlantic Ocean. Custom-designed estate homes feature more than 200 feet of seashore and golf course frontage.

Las Casitas Village and Golden Door® Spa is a world of pampering unto itself but with easy access to all that El Conquistador Resort has to offer, including its golf course.

Whatever your need, the Club is prepared to meet it, be it pre-arrival provisioning or a chef for your dinner party. There's a full-service spa, tennis courts, fitness and equestrian centers, and a beach house that's the hub for aquatic activities such as snorkeling. You can enjoy Bahamian cuisine, cocktails and ocean views at The Clubhouse restaurant.

All this frames the Club's centerpiece, a unique, 18-hole tropical links championship golf course, with 14 holes traversing wind-blown dunes along the bay. Tees and greens perched on top of dunes provide stunning ocean views; greens and fairways nestled in valleys and swales are protected from the omnipresent trade winds. It's vintage links golf. Sorenstam calls the course "amazing."

The Club is a self-contained paradise with many options for enjoying it. You can own a home or cottage or opt for a golf or social membership. Owners can rent their properties when not using; the Club will manage this for them. No matter how you visit, it's a getaway offering barefoot luxury.

You can escape to your own Caribbean hideaway at Las Casitas Village & Golden Door Spa. The resort offers a world of pampering unto itself, with spacious one, two- and three-bedroom casitas where balcony doors open onto ocean views and an infinity pool that seems to meld with the ocean.

Right next door is the challenge of El Conquistador Resort's Arthur Hills—designed par-72 Mountain Course, which runs along the ocean, with picturesque but daunting hills and bunkers. Prevailing trade winds add their puckish touch to a lush, perfectly manicured course.

And, of course, you can't miss the rejuvenating powers of the Golden Door Spa, with its views of El Yunque Rainforest and the Caribbean. It's the perfect setting for a spa that uses local herbs and plants blended exclusively for soothing body and facial treatments.

titude; its light and airy guest rooms meld clean, modern decor with Jamaican accents. Set on 400 lush acres nestled between mountain and sea, it's a place to relax and play.

For water-park lovers, the spectacular Sugar Mill Falls boasts an inner-tube river, thrill slide, falls and lagoons. Island adventure beckons with parasailing, snorkeling, scuba diving and more.

Finally, when you're ready to unwind, at the Zen-inspired spa, a haven that revitalizes and relaxes, awaits. ■
